VOLUME 25 | Entered at the Post Office at Janesville, Wis., as second-class matter. | JANESVILLE, WISCONSIN, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1881. | Published Every Evening Except Sunday, at $7 a Year. | NUMBER 219

The official vote of forty-six counties in this State has been received at Madison, and the latest indication is that the Republican majority will range from 10,000 to 14,000.

Dr. Richard S. Storrs, of Brooklyn, New York, finished his thirty-fifth years pastorate of his church, on Sunday, and in consideration thereof he was presented with a check of $35,000.

They have very poor marksmen in Washington. A man on horseback made an attempt to shoot Guiteau on Saturday afternoon, but too much bad whisky caused him to miss his mark.

The newspapers have had a good deal to say of late about Miss Clara Louise Kellogg's proposed marriage to Mr. Whitney, the New York retired broker, and when the question is mentioned to the great prima donna, it is said she laughs merrily and nods her pretty head, and says, "next April."

It is said that the war between Blaine and Conkling has been waged for twenty years. These old veterans don't seem to be the worse for the war. Blaine is Secretary of State, and is worth a solid million, and Conkling is able to retire from public life and make a little fortune every year out of his law business.

It is rumored that Captain Timme, Secretary of State-elect, will appoint Mr. Mortimer W. Park, editor of the Elkhorn Independent, as Assistant Secretary of State. Mr. Park is a very competent man for the position. For several years he was principal of the Racine schools, and eight years was professor in the State Normal School at Oshkosh.

The Supreme Court of Vermont has pronounced sentence upon Mrs. Emeline L. Meeker, who was convicted of child-murdering, ordering her to be confined in the State prison till the last Friday of March, 1883, the last three months to be spent in solitary confinement, and then to be hanged. This is one of the severest sentences ever pronounced upon a murderer—man or woman—in the United States.

The Gazette gives full particulars in another column of the lynching of the murderer Ed Maxwell, alias Williams, at Durand, on Saturday afternoon. That this cold-blooded and daring murderer should at last be suspended from a tree with a rope around his neck, is not at all strange. He and his brother had committed a murder most foul, and the only legal punishment in store for him, was a sort of lazy life in the penitentiary at Waupun, where his confinement would not have been more severe than those who had committed burglarly or had stolen an overcoat. This fact aroused the people of Duun and Pepin counties, and a dozen or more courageous fellows, backed by the presence and sympathy of five hundred others, dragged him from the court house to a tree, and in less than three minutes from the time the first leap was made for him, his body was dangling in the air. The people of Durand had very little to do with this unfortunate circumstance. The men who took the most active part in the business, were strangers in Durand—strong-armed lumbermen—who were bound that the murder of the Colemans should be avenged. A desperately hardened criminal, one who could commit the foulest murder, and talk about it without a blush of shame or tinge of remorse, is out of the way. The public will feel easier because he is gone, but will hardly endorse the manner of his going.

THE SPEAKERSHIP.

The Chicago Inter Ocean seconds the movement in favor of Charles G. Williams, of Wisconsin, as speaker of the next House of Representatives. Mr. Williams has had the experience of a decade of continuous service in the House and is a favorite with his fellow members. His election to the speakership might be the means of smoothing over some asperities in the organization of the House.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

The above suggestion is one that the people of his congressional district will be heartily pleased to have carried out to a man. And not only here, but throughout the State is Mr. Williams strong in the affections of the people. In a marked degree he is the possessor of those attributes which are necessary for the speakership. His long experience in the House has given him an insight into men and measures which will be valuable in such a high office. The Journal most heartily endorses the suggestion, and hopes that his selection as speaker will be an assured fact.—Racine Journal.

Prior to the adjournment of last Congress when the State press was connecting Mr. Williams' name with the Speakership of the House of Representatives, the Gazette, at the request of that gentleman, stated that he had no desire to be, and would not be, a candidate for that office. While many of his old associates in the House have proposed his name, and in fact urged it, he has made the same reply to them; and while he is very grateful for the kind mention of the press, he still adheres to the same purpose, the Gazette making this statement at the personal request of Mr. Williams. The position is one for which he has not, and never had, the slightest ambition.

It is flattering to Mr. Williams that so many leading newspapers of the West and so many prominent members of Congress, representing all sections of the country, have so heartily endorsed him for the exalted position of Speaker of the House.

"Brick" Pomery is in bankruptcy again. He has made a regular business to fail every year or two since he went to New York in 1868. Since that time he has done a good deal of roaming, and has tried several newspaper enterprises, in all of which he failed. He went to Denver two years ago, and had about two dollars in his pocket, and he wouldn't have had that if his debts had been paid. He started another paper, and organized a mining company, and issued dollar certificates of stock. He got the money of working men and widows. He launched into all sorts of speculations. His mail brought him in from $10,000 to $20,000 a day, and when his receipts had aggregated enough to justify him to fail, he failed. "Brick" is never himself unless he is in some extravagant speculation which will eventually throw him into bankruptcy.

LYNCHED.

The Red-Handed Desperado Hanged at Durand Yesterday.

THE ACCOUNT OF THE LYNCHING.

DURAND, Nov. 19.—Edward Maxwell to-day waived examination before an earthly Judge, and in ten minutes after was summoned before the Eternal Judge. He was hung by a crowd of excited citizens of Dunn and Pepin counties at 2:15 p. m., in the presence of at least 500 people, among whom were the widow, children, and brother of his victims. This morning between 9 and 10 o'clock he sent for your reporter, who, arriving at the cell he left the evening before, found a gaping crowd peering through the bars, and in the cell proper several persons talking to Ed, whose that he might walk up and down and relieve his limbs of numbness. He took me into a corner and said: "I haven't any friends here. I guess I haven't many anywhere, but you don't seem particularly hostile, and I would like to ask you what you think about my waiving examination. They told me I was to be examined at 9 o'clock this morning, but now I hear the District Attorney says he won't be ready until 2 o'clock this afternoon. I guess if I waive a hearing he won't have much to get ready. What do you think about it? I told him a prolonged hearing could do him no good, and he then said, "I've make up my mind, then. But before I leave the court room." The jail—a common two-story frame house, with iron gratings at the windows and wooden ones inside, a flimsy structure throughout—stands on a little eminence about a block and a half from the courthouse. When I reached the yard I found a number of people therein, all waiting patiently, though it was far from warm and there was several inches of snow on the ground, for when he should be brought out for his preliminary examination. Most of those gathered there seemed like farmers or lumberman from out of town, and there wrs a fair sprinkling of women and children. As the minutes passed the crowd augmented, and when two o'clock came, the court-room up stairs, a small apartment at best, was crowded to suffocation. As Maxwell cool and collected as he was yesterday when he landed from a skiff in the midst of a crowd on the river bank and not showing the faintest trace af nervousness, was led through the aisle between Deputies Knight and Coleman the crowd surged and pushed to get a better sight of him, and threats grew from mutterings to menaces, but

and stood before Justices Dwyer and Huntington as unconcernedly as if he had been on the bench and they in the dock. His eyes roamed a moment over the crowd, and I saw his lips move into a half sneering smile. Possibly he was thinking of a remark he made to a gentleman in the morning: "There will be a big crowd at the examination to-day. You stand at the door and sell tickets, and be sure you divvy on the square." To the formal question he pleaded not guilty, and then said: "I waive examination and would like to make a statement." He was told to go on, and spoke as follows: "We killed the Coleman boys in self-defense, but didn't know them from Adam. We were sitting in the grove up town when we saw them pass us. They had guns with them, and looked around often as if searching for something. We knew there was no game about there, and that they wouldn't be hunting Sunday.

SO WE KNEW THEY WERE AFTER US, and kept a sharp lookout. When they got past us they started to run. Then we got over the fence and followed them up the road, thinking we were surrounded and caught in a trap. We had not gone but a short distance before we met them, and the one nearest the fence (Michon Coleman) fired first, his shot hitting Lon in the face and arm. Charley fired at me, and I at him in a second later. His shot struck my arm, and he felt to my bullet, but got on his knee and fired again. Lou had shot the other one before that, and both were down. We then turned and ran." All this was delivered in a conversational tone, as if it were a recital of the most ordinary adventure, and I could see as the story progressed that the spectators were edging nearer and nearer to him. He had scarcely finished—indeed, I am inclined to think he was about to continue—when with a growl like a wild beast

A DOZEN MEN SPRANG ON HIM.

Women shrieked as the melee grew greater, and it was impossible to tell for a moment what was being done. The officers made resistance, but not a very determined one, and in less than a minute the prisoner was dragged through the yelling crowd to the door. A rope had made its appearance as if by magic, and when he reached the outer door the noose was round his neck. I caught one glimpse of his face as he was going down the stairs. It was as pale as marble, but his eyes glared defiance, and every look betokened the agonizing wish: "If I had but my Winchester and a second's freedom," but arms and freedom Omnipotence alone could have given him. The crowd, the initiative having been taken, was

WILD WITH PASSION.

"Hang him!" "Choke him!" "Burn him," etc., etc., were heard on all sides, and if pity was felt by a single creature its expression was not heard. It took minutes to write this, it took seconds only to reach the tree I spoke of above. The end of the rope was over the projecting bough in an instant, and a shuddering sob went up from the onlookers as the body of the desperado was jerked into the air, a score of willing hands tugging at the other end of the rope. There were a few spasmodic clutches of the iron hands, the feet were drawn up once or twice, and then the head fell over with that sickening droop familiar to all who have witnessed such a death, and

ALL WAS OVER.

The cord of the rope was made fast, the crowd dispersed in the awsome silence that fell after the deed was done, and the body, so full of muscular energy a few moments before, swung to and fro in the cold wind, the drifting snow ever and anon hiding it in its drifting rush. Maxwell died as he had lived, a desperate man, but endowed with an amount of physical courage rare indeed, and filled with a restless energy that preferred crime to inaction.

THE ASSAULT.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The policemen have discovered no additional clews to sustain the theory that the assault upon Guiteau on Saturday afternoon was the result of a conspiracy. The officer who gave the first intimations upon which the conspiracy was based is still of the same opinion. He claims to know that a pistol was handed to Jones, if Jones be the man who committed the assault, while he was riding on the horse behind the van, not far from the foot of the Capitol Hill, and that he thinks he can identify the person who handed the pistol. He also says that while the van was chasing the rapid rider, after he had fired the pistol into it, he saw the reckless rider give some sort of signal, whereupon a person came from a concealed place and took the pistol from the rider.

If this story can be maintained it is very probable that the police are mistaken as to the person they have arrested, because there was plainly a pistol upon him. The police choose to be very mysterious about the matter to-day, and it is very doubtful whether they have any definite theory. Public opinion for that matter, would sustain them if they did not make too earnest efforts to detect either the would-be avenger or his accomplices, if he has any. While all acknowledge that the proceedings of law must be respected, there is a general fear that sentimentalism in the court house and in the jury box may defeat the ends of justice, and that Guiteau, who seems at all times to be fully conscious of the consequences of his acts, may escape punishment on the plea of insanity, and few in Washington consider his life worth more than that of the commonest cur about the streets. Even his own brother says that if he is not insane he should be hanged, but that, if he should be by any chance acquitted, he probably would not be permitted to live anywhere upon the face of the earth.

A World of Good.

One of the most popular medicines now before the American public is Hop Bitters. You see it everywhere. People take it with good effect. It builds them up. It is not as pleasant to the taste as some other Bitters as it is not a whisky drink. It is more like the old fashioned bone set tea that has done a world of good. If you don't feel just right try Hop Bitters.—Nunda News.

PATTI'S TOUR.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The statement that Henry E. Abbey is to manage Mme. Patti's tour through the United States causes much favorable comment. The season will open at Brooklyn, Nov. 28. The company will proceed to Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Chicago, and Detroit. It is thought possibly that Milwaukee, Cleveland and Pittsburg may also be visited. Abbey pays Patti $5,000 per night and all expenses of the troupe. He also provides an orchestra of fifty pieces in the larger cities. It is understood that $5 will be the maximum price paid for seats. The Diva will appear in various scenes from favorite operas, thus giving the public an opportunity to see her in her various roles.

SENSATIONAL SUICIDE.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 19.—The coroner has at yet held no inquest on the remains of the beautiful young Swedish girl who recently committed suicide by allowing a train of cars to sever her head from her body. To-day a lady who knew the girl, Emma Peterson, in Sweden, said that her parents were wealthy, and had attempted to force her to marry against her wishes. The young lady fled to this country, and finding it difficult to procure employment, became despondent and finally committed the rash act which ended her life.

KASSON'S CANDIDACY.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—Members of the next House are arriving daily, and among them the election of Speaker is the engrossing topic. It is claimed by Kasson's friends, with a great deal of confidence, that he is speedily gaining strength. It is evident that he will get a liberal support from the East. Indeed, some of the Eastern members' talk that the Speakership contest will be sectional is a mistake; that Kasson will get more votes from Eastern members than any other candidate, not excepting Hiscock.

None of the candidates for speaker yet give estimates of their expected vote. Kasson has a solid Iowa delegation to back him, besides votes from other Western States, and some that are promised to him from the East.

Keifer has all the Ohio Republicans, and claims others, both West and East. In his behalf votes from Illinois, Pennsylvania and New Jersey are claimed.

Orth has all the Republicans of his State, but does not yet claim any more, and does not believe that any candidate has any votes pledged out of his State.

Hiscock says the report that the New York Republican delegation is not united for him is not true; that he has pledges of them all. He claims votes outside of New York, but does not name them.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 20.—Miss Clara Louise Kellogg, who begins a concert engagement here to-morrow night, announced to her company here to-night her engagement and approaching marriage with Mr. T. $35,000 CHECK.

NEW YORK, November 20.—The Rev. Dr. Richard S. Storrs, of Brooklyn, has been presented with a check for $35,000, in commemoration of his thirty-five years' pastorate of the Church of the Pilgrims. The presentation was made at the residence of Mr. Ward, No. 65 Pierrepont street, where a large number of the members of the church and others had gathered.

Domestic Education.

Mothers are frequently so over-nice and particular that they refuse to share their household duties with their young daughters for fear something will be slighted or improperly done.

Now, this is all wrong. Children, no matter what their position or prospects in life may be, should be taught while young to make themselves useful, and to assist those about them in every way possible.

Girls especially should be early trained to a thorough knowledge of household duties and familiarized with the routine of daily work, even if the trouble they make far outbalances the small amount of assistance reddered. A daughter so trained is not the one that grows up to laziness and helplessness; that comes tardily to breakfast and sits listlessly around, thinking and knowing and caring as little about what is going on in the house as a stranger would, as it interferes with personal comfort and convenience. She is the mother's confidant, the father's comforter and a blessing to the household.

If it is true, as has been sung, that it is love that makes the world go round, it is equally certain that prudence, patience and kindred praiseworthy qualities must oil the wheels of the domestic world, if they are to revolve smoothly.

Flocks of school girls are annually "finished off" and turned out into the world as accomplished young women, nearly every one of whom expects to marry sometime and make a home of her own, and yet, among them all, how many have any true idea of the real issues of life, or measure the depth of the sea of perplexities into which they plunge blissfully and blindly?

Trouble for the average young housewife begins in her ignorance of domestic economy and the proper preparation of food for the table.

Who shall count the difficulties and dilemmas that lurk in refractory stoves, the disappointments and discouragements that lie hidden in the flour barrel, or the ambushed trials that rise unexpectedly from pot and pan and kettle? Their name is legion.

It would seem as though every mother who has herself wrestled with the mysteries of household labor, ought to learn a lesson from life's experience, and take measures to turn her daughter's trials into triumph, by making her as thoroughly familiar with the science of the cookery-book and the problem of domestic economy, as with the various branches of school education, or the more ornamental parlor accomplishments.

Yes, I know it is more trouble to teach her how to cook than it is to do everything yourself. Very likely there will be more than one failure to record, and she may be an uninterested pupil; duty is not always agreeable, but it is none the less duty.

If the early household lessons have been well learned, the later ones will not be difficult; if they have been altogether neglected so much the more reason that there should be no further delay. Circumstances may prevent the necessity of performing much domestic work, but everyone should at least know how to direct others understandingly. Girls are not apt to give due importance to these matters; by experience alone can one really appreciate the difficulties arising from ignorance, or estimate the true value of knowledge in regard to a subject so materially influencing domestic health and comfort.—Cor. Prairie Farmer.

A Wonderful Utah Canyon.

In returning to Cove Creek Fort, I again journeyed through Clear Creek canyon. It is mentioned on the map as "the pass to Sevier," and is one of the great natural wonders of Utah. It is about ten miles in length, and through it flows a limpid mountain stream that soon joins the river Sevier. In proceeding westward, the first object of interest is at the very mouth of the canyon, and has been named the Buried Castle. At a very short distance it closely resemble some vast, time-worn castle, half-buried in dust and accumulated rubbish. The towers, battlements and roofs, rising one above another, have a strangely real appearance. As the canyon narrows, on the left is the dome, a mass of rock, oval at the summit, which rises hundreds of feet in the air. Half a mile farther on, and on the right, is "Who Knows;" a huge rock having the outlines of a human face, with a very prominent and well-shapen nose. It stands close to the road. Next the attention is attracted by Indian hieroglyphics on the side of a perpendicular wall of rock and at a height of about seventy-five feet from the ground. These symbols have been there for so long a period that the Indians inhabiting the country when the Mormons came could give no explanation of them, save that they "had always been there." The rock seems to have been deeply chiseled into, and the cavities filled with indelible paint. A mile farther on is the Throne Room. This magnificent indentation is about two hundred feet from the ground in the perpendicular side of a basaltic wall five hundred feet high. I shall attempt no description of it, save to say that no king in the world has so grand a reception hall. About half way up the canyon is Conscience Pass. Here perpendicular walls of rock tower six hundred feet high, and approach so closely together that there is barely room for the brook and the narrow highway that runs beside it. At the distance of twenty yards from the pass the traveler's progress seems completely barred by walls of rock. From that point the canyon widens, but it abounds throughout with wild and splendid scenery. It is said to be seen to best advantage in the summer, when its declivities are clothed with verdure and flowers, and its pines are in their utmost vigor.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Kind Words and Good Deeds.

"I saw in de papers de odder day," began Brother Gardner, after carefully wiping the top of his head, "a leetle item 'bout speakin' kind words to our feller-men as we trabble do highway of life. Dat's easy 'nuff to do, an' a mighty cheap way of scrubbin' 'long, but I doan' want nobody to practice it on me. If I see men right, dey will use me right, an' we kin trade kind words. If you meet a man in de gutter, doan' stan' on de sidewalk an' tell him dat you am ready to bust wid sorrow, an' dat you solemnly wish he wouldn't do so any mo'. Stan' him on his feet an' start him fur home, an' let his wife an' de poker run de kind word bizness, or hunt for a purleeceman an' have de drunkard boosted for sixty days. If you meet a poo' man whos' wife lyin' dead in de house doan' wipe yer eyes an rattle yer chin an' tell him you'd jine de funeral purceshun if you only had a mule. Walk right down inter yer west pocket fur half yer week's wages to help pay fur de coffin an' odder expenses. If you meet a feller-man who am out of wood an' meat an' flour, an' has a broken arm to excuse it, doan' pucker yer mouth an' tell him dat de Lawd will purvide. De Lawd doan' furnish purvishuns fur dis market. Instead of droppin' a tear of sorrow on de doah-step, stop aroun' to de wood yard an' de grocer's and lay down de cash to feed an' warm de family fur a fortnight.

"When I meet a leetle gal who has lost her doll-baby, or a leetle boy who has stubbed his toe, I take 'em up in my a'ms an' wipe der leetle noses an' set 'em down wid a handful of peanuts. When I meet a widder who am out of wood, an old man who has been turned out doahs, or a workin'man who's home am under de shadder of death, I doan' lean on de fence an' look to Heaben fur relief. If I'ze got a dollar I han' it out. I lend it or give it or make 'em take it, an' if Heaben does anyfing furder dat's extra. When you read dat it am easy to speak kind words, jist reflect dat it am also de cheapest way in de world to help a naybur. Turnips am quoted at forty cents a bushel; kind words have no value in de market."—Detroit Free Press.

How the Russians Dress.

Many of the illusions which the traveler brings with him from his readings are, indeed, somewhat rudely dispelled. Of the "silken garments of the Bokharian or Persian," of the "dangling tail of the Chinaman," of the "pearly teeth of the Arabian," of the "wild-looking savages and skin-clad Esquimaux," which writers of fifty years since described as ordinary sights in the streets of St. Petersburg or Moscow, you see now as little as of the Cyclops of Ulysses or the Lestrigons of Sir John Mandeville. Even here, on the border of Asia, Tartar, Armenians and Persians are only distinguishable by their fur caps a little higher or a little lower, turban-shape or miter-shaped. For the quaintness of old Muscovite costume or gorgeous Eastern finery, a man must nowadays be referred to picture-books or museums. The tendency of our age is to Frenchify the very gorillas. The only article that distinguishes the Russian from any European, and especially from an English crowd, is a head-gear, for the cylinder or tall hat seems to be held in abhorrence, and is hardly ever seen, even on foreign heads, in bureaucratic and cosmopolitan St. Petersburg—not so much, probably, because the crazy Emperor Paul waged war against those hats and against shoestrings in his ukases as because winter would forbid their use under penalty of a forfeiture of a man's ears for six months in the year, and the habit of a half-year sets the people here against the wear of our awkward, irrational and unbecoming chimney-pot during the other half.

The Russian custom of the lower classes consists of a black or white cap, with the brim drawn down on the brow and shading the eyes; a long, loose, shapeless dark-blue or brown greatcoat, flowing down to the heels, and heavy top boots up to the knee. From the folds of the coat you may here and there catch the sight of the red blouse or of the broad red sash and black velvet breeches which were once popular; but, as a rule, the black, long gaberdine hides everything; and, bating the color or tissue, the same garment, the same medley of international rags, seems equally to suit Russian or Tartar, Moslem or Christian, Gipsy or Jew. Merchants and brokers, and other middle-class idlers who crowd the steps of the exchange, wear the jacket and wide-awake hat now common to all Europe; gentlemen of a higher rank are either in military or civilian uniform, and these also throw over it their heavy riding cloaks, regardless of the stifling heat, a Russian apparently never feeling comfortable unless he is swathed in loose drapery from head to foot. The funny park-pie hats worn by the droski drivers in St. Petersburg or Moscow disappear as we come farther east, and here the Isvoshthik buries his head and half his face in his ugly black hanging cap like other men. The Russians are as hirsute a race as any Asiatic. Those of the lower classes, whether out of ancient Muscovite pride or to spite the shade of Peter the Great, the great shaver, are bristling with such full, long beards as might excite the envy of their shaggiest Kalmuck or Samojede fellow-subjects; some few have a mane at the back of the head down to the shoulders, but for most of them the hair is clipped in a straight line by the barber, a primitive artist, who claps an earthen pot on over the head and ears when they go to him for a shearing, and trims round and round whatever protrudes from the pot. Hair and beard are usually unkempt and tangled, a fit frame for the face, where a coating of several weeks' dirt neutralizes the color of the skin.—London Times.

The Charleston Buzzards.

The sacred bird in Charleston is the buzzard, not for any majesty of mien or dignity of flight, but because of its supposed efficiency as a scavenger.

There is not in the animal creation a more disgusting bird than the buzzard. It is associated in idea with filth and corruption. Where decay and foulness unspeakable are found, there will the buzzard be. Unhappily, the haunt of the buzzard in Charleston is the otherwise clean and sightly market. The one place which should be without spot or blemish, and is really admirably kept, is defiled by the presence of loathsome buzzards. These birds swoop about the streets alongside the market, wrangling over morsels of meat or offal, and when market hours are over they do not confine themselves to the streets. The thought that they can drag themselves over the stalls is not conducive to appetite, especially in warm weather.

Of what use are the buzzards? They swallow gluttonously the scraps from the market, and so keep the streets clean. But there is no necessity for throwing offal into the streets in order that buzzards shall play scavenger. When the butchers gather up their offal and rubbish as other citizens are obliged to do, there will be no need of scavengers, and the buzzards will find another roost. And if no offal is now thrown out and no scavenger is needed, why are the buzzards held in reverence?

There is a tradition that any one who molests one of the buzzards in Charleston Market will be fined five dollars. Nobody has been fined in this way these many years. Why the fine, if ever authorized, was ever imposed, no one has vouchsafed to explain. The presumption is that the buzzards are deemed venerable because they have haunted the market time out of mind. They are, so to speak, a landmark. If this is a reason for not interfering with them, there was good reason for objecting to such innovations as street cars, gas and water works.—Charleston (S. C.) News.

H. A. PATTERSON, P. M.

The Game of Boston.

The game at cards called "Boston," says a late writer in the New York Times, after the capital of Massachusetts, and much played by our forefathers, has lately been revived, it is said, in New England and in New York, especially here, and is greatly enjoyed on account of the skill required for proficiency. Boston is played by four persons with two packs of cards, which are never shuffled. One of the packs is dealt and the other cut alternately, to determine the trump, the trump governing the game. The dealer deals five cards to each player twice, and deals six cards the last time around. If the first player can make, or thinks he can make five tricks from his hand, he says: "I go Boston," and his fellow-players may overbid him with the words: "I go 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12 or 13," as the hand of each may justify. Should any one fail to make the number of tricks he bids for, he must pay to each competitor a forfeit, regulated by a scale of prices agreed upon beforehand. The agreement is imperative; without it the game is impossible. It is accounted the most complex and difficult of all games at cards, and is therefore a favorite with professional gamblers. Boston has been played in France and England, where it is often spoken of as the American game. Benjamin Franklin has the reputation of introducing it in Paris. He gave it the name of his native city, and is said to have been a very clever player. The philosophers of the eighteenth century, who were his companions in France, were very fond of the game and delighted in its novelty. Baron d'Holbach is reported to have said that only a man of genius could excel at Boston. The game has always been played more or less in the Southwest, where much money is still lost and won by it.

A Monster Lizzard.

There is displayed in a glass case in Baltimore a living specimen of a guano lizzard, lately brought from the Navassa Islands in the brig Romance. This handsome crawler is three feet in length, two-thirds of which is tail, with the head of a crocodile, an enormous mouth, furnished with two dangerous rows of sharp serrated teeth, two pouches or sacks at the base of the jaw, a loose skin of a dirty brown color, and a curious nodosity near the tip of its nose. It is one of the largest of the species ever seen, and, on account of the size of the sacs and the nodosity, is supposed to be forty or fifty years old by people who are accustomed to them in the guano islands. It stands its change of quarters remarkably well, and is lively enough, but its vicious temper is exhibited in its wicked-looking eye and its attempt to snap at a hand or a stick that is placed near it. Its appetite is excellent, and it manages to get along comfortably on crackers, cabbage, &c.

A Fellow-Feeling.

The manager of a dramatic combination playing an engagement in Detroit was approached on the last day by a stranger, who asked for a pass for that evening:

"Why should I give you a pass?" was the blunt demand.

"On account of the fellow-feeling," was the serene reply.

"Sir, I do not know you."

"Neither do I know you, but that isn't the fellow-feeling I had reference to."

"Do you belong to the profession?"

"No."

"Then I fail to see how there is anything in common."

"You struck this town last Monday, didn't you?" asked the stranger.

"Yes."

"So did I, and I'm going out of it to-night dead broke, same as you. That's my point, may it please the court."

The "court" whistled a melancholy tune, figured up the cash receipts once more, and then wrote the pass without further argument.

MANY years ago there lived at Salem, Connecticut, an eccentric man named Amasa Kilborn, about whom numberless stories are told to this day. On one occasion in summer he had a five acre lot of choice grass, cut and spread out to dry. In the afternoon a shower came up and drenched it. The next day the hay was spread out to dry. Another shower came up and re-drenched it. On the third day the programme was repeated. On the fourth day, after the hay had been properly dried and raked into windrows, a cloud pillar moved up over the western horizon, and a distant growl of thunder echoed from the hills. Kilborn was mad. He looked at the hay and looked at the cloud. "Run up to the house, boy," he said, in a voice trembling with resentment, "and bring down a firebrand, quick, now!" The boy asked no questions. He came back with the blazing torch, and Kilborn touched off each windrow. "There," said he, "I'll see if this hay will get wet again!"

"The doctors said my wife had consumption. Tried 'Lindsey's Blood Searcher,' and she has better health than ever." G. H. Hubbard, Hampden, Ohio.

Humbugged Again.

I saw so much said about the merits of Hop Bitters, and my wife, who was always doctoring, and never well, teased me so urgently to get her some I concluded to be humbugged again; and I am glad I did, for in less than two months' use of the Bitters my wife was cured, and she has remained so for eighteen months since. I like such humbugging.—H. T., St. Paul.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—A water-snake recently killed in Allowaystown, N. J., was found to contain sixty-five young snakes averaging ten inches in length.

—A mother sparrow tumbled a little one out of its nest in a tree in Hartford and a cat started for it. Two birds attacked the cat with so much vigor that she was compelled to retreat.

—The owner was asleep under a seat of the wagon which, with the horses attached, was stolen near Columbus, O. He remained quiet until the thieves drove into a village, when he made an outcry, and they were arrested.

—Helen F. Argus, eight years of age, attempted to rescue a younger child from the wheels of an ice-cart at Providence, R. I. She succeeded in doing so, but lost her own life, falling under the wheels, which crushed her head.

—An Englishman arrived at a Swiss inn and ordered an old bottle of wine of a better quality than the wine of the country. The landlord produced a bottle whose label certified to fourteen years. When the bottle was uncorked the first thing to appear was a live fly.

—Peter Bogart and wife, of Downsville, Pa., have just celebrated their diamond wedding, or seventy-fifth anniversary of marriage. Mr. Bogart was born May 14, 1786, and his wife is only three months his junior. They were married on September 13, 1806, and both are in excellent health, bidding fair to celebrate their one hundredth birthday. Mr. and Mrs. Bogart are probably the oldest married couple in Pennsylvania, and have a large family living.

—The two-years-old child of S. J. Drinkwater, of White Plains, N. Y., while playing in the streets was supposed by his dog to be in danger of being run over. He jumped into the street and threw his front legs about the child and endeavored to pull it to the sidewalk. Finding that he was unable to accomplish this, he pushed the child down and spread himself over it, with his forelegs outside, in which position he remained until the horse and carriage passed.

—John Bunt and Annie Peters were to have been married in Pulaski County, Ky., recently, near the Lincoln line. The preacher and invited guests had arrived. There was a storm coming. During a pause in the wind the expectant bride went to the door to welcome the groom. She gave a joyous laugh of recognition and ran to meet him at the gate; but at that moment a bolt of thunder shook the hills, and Annie Peters fell dead from a stroke of lightning.

—Mr. Rossom, following up the work of Layard and Smith at Babylon, has found an entire history of that empire from the seventh year of Nabonitius to the capture of the city by Cyrus; also fragments of inscriptions of Nebuchadnezzar and a proclamation by Alexander the Great. Parts of the hanging gardens have been unearthed at the Babel Mound. Various extremely ancient cities around Babylon have also been unearthed and traces of races and nations that reach back nearly to Noah.

—Here is about the most strictly local work of a whirlwind on record. A ship with $300,000 of British goods is passing Rio Janeiro on her way to China. She is sailing nine knots, with no clouds in sight. The Captain in his cabin hears a crash. Goes up to find the mainmast lying over the starboard side with mizzentopmast, foretopsail yards and foretopgallantmast—the mainmast—twisted off near the deck. The mate said he had heard a rushing sound; the whirlwind struck the sails on the mainmast with a thud—those on other masts being untouched—and away went the masts and spars mentioned. The ship was otherwise all right, the wreck was cut away and she sailed safely into Rio.

—Cummings engaged himself to marry a Pennsylvania widow, Mrs. Kennedy, but he was disturbed by the fact that her first husband had been dead only a year, and on the day set for the wedding sent her a note saying that he would go into the solitude of the woods to pray for Divine guidance. The enraged widow read the message to the guests when they assembled, and declared that she would not become Cummings' wife, no matter what light he might obtain from above. Williams, an old and previously discarded suitor, saw his opportunity and offered to act as bridegroom. He was accepted, and when Cummings arrived, with his conscience quieted, there was no widow.

—The most recent reported victim of the dime novel is Charlie Elwell, a Boston lad. He became such an ardent admirer of William the Kid, and gentlemen of his stamp, that he longed for a life of freedom on the rolling prairies. To such an extent did he thus long that he forged a check for $250. With the money thus secured he laid in a stock of suitable weapons, and then, heavily armed, went to the depot. Fortunately for the poor Indian, the lad was arrested. Charlie will now have leisure to reflect that the life of even a Boston clerk, uneventful as it may be, is preferable to that of an inmate of a reformatory or State prison. If the boys would drop these crazy dime novels, fewer of them would be caught in such silly scrapes.

Chinamen's Wives.

A Chinaman, when anxious to have a wife of his own nation, says The North China Herald, sends a letter to an agent in Hong Kong. A reporter has one of these epistles, but it is practically impossible to translate it into English. The following, however, is a condensed translations: "I want a wife. She must be a maiden under twenty years of age, and must not have left her father's house. She must also have never read a book, and her eye-lashes must be half an inch in length. Her teeth must be as sparkling as the pearls of Ceylon. Her breath must be like unto the scents of the magnificent odorous groves of Java, and her attire must be from the silken weavers of Ka-Li-Ching, which are on the banks of the greatest river in the world—the overflowing Yang-tse-Kiang." The price of a Chinese woman, delivered in Sydney, is £38, but two Chinese women only cost £52; therefore, the heathen Chinese import the women in couples. The importer never sees his women before they arrive, and then he generally selects the best-looking one. The other is shown around to a number of well-to-do Chinese, and, after they have inspected her, she is submitted to what may be called public auction. The writer happened to be present at one of these sales. A young girl, aged about 19, was offered, and after some spirited bidding she was purchased by a wealthy Chinese store-keeper, whose place of business is in one of the leading towns of New South Wales, for £120. The melancholy aspect of the Celestial girl as she went away in company with the man who purchased her was deplorable to the last degree.

AND SPERMATORRHŒA.

A valuable Discovery and New Departure in Medical Science, an entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent Cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency by the only true way, viz: Direct Application to the principal Seat of the Disease, acting by Absorption, and exerting its specific influence on the Seminal Vesicles, Ejaculatory Ducts, Prostate Gland, and Urethra. The use of the Remedy is attended with no pain or inconvenience, and does not interfere with the ordinary pursuits of life; it is quickly dissolved and soon absorbed, producing an immediate soothing and restorative effect upon the sexual and nervous organizations wrecked from self-abuse and excesses, stopping the drain from the system, restoring the mind to health and sound memory, removing the Dimness of Sight, Nervous Debility, Confusion of Ideas, Aversion to Society, etc., etc., and the appearance of premature old age usually accompanying this trouble, and restoring perfect Sexual Vigor, where it has been dormant for years. This mode of treatment has stood the test in very severe cases, and is now a pronounced success. Drugs are too much prescribed in these troubles, and, as many can bear witness to, with but little if any permanent good. There is no Nonsense about this Preparation. Practical observation enables us to positively guarantee that it will give satisfaction. During the eight years that it has been in general use, we have thousands of testimonials as to its value, and it is now conceded by the Medical Profession to be the most rational means yet discovered of reaching and curing this very prevalent trouble, that is well known to be the cause of untold misery to so many, and upon whom quacks prey with their useless nostrums and big fees. The Remedy is put up in neat boxes, of three sizes. No. 1, (enough to last a month,) $3; No. 2, (sufficient to effect a permanent cure, unless in severe cases,) $5; No. 3, (lasting over three months, will stop emissions and restore vigor in the worst cases,) $7. Sent by mail, sealed, in plain wrappers. Full DIRECTIONS for using will accompany EACH BOX.

(Send for Sealed Descriptive Pamphlet giving Anatomical Illustrations and Testimony, which will convince the most skeptical that they can be restored to perfect manhood, and fitted for the duties of life, same as if never affected. Sold ONLY by

Has been acquired by candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

My practice, not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with years of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, make sick to make well; no harsh treatment, no trifling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed; no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic Diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinions, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or cure everybody, but do lay claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their ailment, to call and investigate before they abandon hope, make interrogations and decide for yourselves; it will cost nothing as consultation is free. BRIEFLETS.

—Regular night for the Orpheus club to rehearse.

—The Bower City Rifles meet for drill this evening.

—Window screens have been supplemented by coal screens.

—It is said that a union depot is soon to be built at Davis Junction.

—Sleighing may not be lively this week, but slaying will be lively among the turkeys.

—Tickets for the Guards party have been placed on sale at Prentice & Evenson's drug store.

—There is to be an appropriate service at Trinity Episcopal church Thanksgiving day at 10:30 o'clock.

—U. H. Smith's Uncle Tom's Cabin company, which was booked for the 28th inst., has cancelled its date.

—Janesville commandery No. 2, Knights Templar, will meet this evening in special conclave. Work—Red Cross.

—E. B. Heimstreet's name now appears over the entrance to his drug store in the form of a very handsome little sign.

—The Guards drill to-night and on Wednesday night, which will be the only drills before the opening of the new armory.

—The Woodroffé glass-blowers are to open to-morrow in Heimstreet's old store, on Main street, and will remain during the week.

—Frances Weaver, a 16-year-old Janesville maiden, has escaped from the North Point Industrial school.—Evening Wisconsin.

—The remains of Gurdon Leonard did not arrive this afternoon as expected. It is thought they will arrive later in the day by the Milwaukee road.

—The Hook and Ladder boys are preparing for a big time Wednesday evening. Their dance will be an enjoyable one without doubt, as elaborate and careful arrangements have been made to secure its success.

—Saturday afternoon Prof. Marco entertained a large company, mostly composed of children, in Lappin's Music hall. He gave some pleasing showings of legerdemain, and distributed candies, etc., to the children.

—The Mutual Improvement Club meets this evening. Papers will be read by Seth Cushman, Misses Charlotte Prichard, Abbie Libboy and Lillie Godden. These meetings are to begin at 7:30 o'clock this season.

—Those who delight in seeing wonderful skill should surely visit Woodroffe's Bohemian glass blowers, who open to-morrow evening in Heimstreet's old store on Main street. They are said to be extraordinarily fine.

—This afternoon death claimed Andrew Robinson, son of L. O. Robinson. He has been ill with typhoid fever for nearly six weeks. He was aged about nineteen years, and his death comes as a heavy blow upon the family and friends.

—To-morrow evening at the Congregational church, Rev. Frank P. Woodbury is to lecture on "The Story of the Book." This is the second of the series of lectures, and those who heard the first will be doubly anxious to hear this one.

—Two saloon keepers, Thomas Mackin and James Ryan have been complained of for selling liquor on Sunday. Ryan pleaded guilty to-day, and was fined by Judge Patten $15 and costs, which he paid. Mackin's case is not disposed of yet.

—The two new cases of small-pox reported prove to be only mild cases of varioloid, and as these are confined to the house where the only other case is, the disease may be considered as surely under control, and with no prospect of a further spread.

—Farady Murphy was lodged in jail last evening by Constable Taylor. It appears that Murphy was in drink yesterday, and was abusing his family so that the officer had to take him in charge. It is claimed that he choked his wife and committed an assault upon one of his daughters.

—Conductor Ed. Carroll has charge of the new train for Rockford which made its first trip this morning. He is an old employe of the road, and is one of its most popular men. The public will find in him a genial and accommodating official, as well as a careful and business-like railroad man.

—Many here will remember Mrs. Maggie O'Connell's attempt at suicide while in the jail here a few months ago. Mrs. Jean Harper who took such an interest in her case, and cared for her kindly, has just received a letter from her from Mendota, where she is confined in the asylum. The unfortunate woman writes Mrs. Harper expressive of her gratitude for the help and advice given her, and declaring her determination to lead a different life, if she can get released. She says she is all right now and her brain is cleared of the muddle which caused her so much trouble.

—Those friends of the Guards who have not received invitations to the opening festivities at the armory next Friday evening, can account for the seeming neglect by one of two reasons. In a few cases the invitations have been missent, and a few mistakes have occurred in delivery. Another reason, covering more cases, is that the invitations ordered from Philadelphia have not all been received. As soon as they arrive they will be promptly sent out to those who have not received them. In any event, it is understood that all friends of the Guards, whether they have received their invitations or not, are cordially urged to appear in person next Friday evening, and participate in the enjoyment to their heart's content.

—Tuesday, Dec. 6th, at 2 o'clock p. m. has been fixed upon as the time for opening the Janesville district conference of the Methodist church, the place to be the First Methodist church, of this city. Wednesday and Thursday will be given to the Sunday school congress to be presided over by Rev. Dr. Vincent, the famous worker and writer in that line. He will be assisted by Rev. A. H. Gillett, another well-known Sunday school man. This will prove a rare chance for all interested in this feature of church work, and it is a cause of congratulation that two such able men could be secured. Those of every denomination are invited to join, and the occasion promises to prove one of the greatest Sunday school events in the history of this city and county. Dr. Vincent has also been engaged to deliver his wonderfully popular lecture on "That Boy."

—Jo Cook appeared before Judge Patten this morning, and expressed his firm determination to reform. Rev. G. W. Lawrence appeared as an excellent adviser, and asked that Jo be allowed to take a strong pledge. One was accordingly drawn up, strong enough to be the foundation of a temperance society, and Jo took an equally strong oath to keep it without so much of a crack as a sip of cider would cause. As Jo has been in jail for a week or so his head was clear, and he was in full possession of all his faculties, and took the step firmly and deliberately. Many citizens here will be glad to learn of this resolve, and will do all they can to encourage him in the keeping of this solemn oath. Jo has always been his own worst enemy, and if he gives the cup a really final shake, he can have friends and prosperity. He seems determined to improve this chance to make a man.

—Miss Hattie Dearborn left this morning for Boston, where she will remain at least for the winter, and will further her musical culture, in which she has already made such flattering progress, and met with such marked success.

BABES IN THE WOODS.

Rice's Evangeline company will surely cause the Opera house to be packed next Thursday afternoon and evening. In the afternoon is to be given that celebrated burlesque opera "Babes in the Woods," and in the evening, "Evangeline." The New York Herald says of the former:

The extravaganza of the "Babes in the Woods" was produced last night at the Union Square Theatre, and notwithstanding the attractions elsewhere the house was crowded. This popular piece so well known to New Yorkers, met with a great old-time reception, and all the principal performers were warmly welcomed in the different roles they were called upon to sustain. The comicality of the situations is so absurd that good hearty laughter resulted from those engaged in the principal situations. With the introduction of "Babes in the Woods" a brilliant summer season may be considered fairly inaugurated.

PLAIN TALK.

Rev. O. A. Curtis Gives an Honest Expression of Some of His Convictions Concerning Temperance Work.

Last evening Rev. O. A. Curtis fulfilled the promise made by him to his congregation a few weeks ago, and gave a discourse concerning the temperance work. He had wisely waited until after the election, that no unjust suspicion might arise as to the purpose of such a talk. In opening he expressed himself as heartily in sympathy with temperance, and willing to work for the success of the cause as best he could, and then proceeded to point out some of the blunders of temperance workers as they appeared to him.

One of these blunders he termed the "Biblical" blunder. Too many temperance workers came to the Bible with a case already made up. They believed in total abstinence and believed in the Bible, and were bound that the two should agree. They were determined to find in all the passages bearing upon the subject a direct and positive prohibition of the use of strong drinks. They found passages which seemed to favor the use of wine, and those had to be got around in some way. So they twisted the words, and hunted for roots, until they formed a theory that whenever wine was spoken of favorably, it meant unfermented wine, or the simple juice of the grape, and where it was denounced, fermented wine was referred to. The weight of linguistic authorities was against this distinction. There was no doubt at all about the Bible being a temperance book, and if the principles laid down in it were carried out, they would bring about temperance, but these principles were not always applied to details, and in different ages, and among different people, these principles had been applied to meet the peculiarities of the time and the race. Temperance workers must treat the Bible fairly, and look beyond the mere words to the underlying principles, and the spirit of the book.

Another blunder he termed the "political" one. He spoke very plainly concerning the recent contest in this State. He was convinced that the spirit of the recent agitation was to gain the balance of power, and to wield this as a club, forcing one or the other of the political parties to terms. He did not believe in this balance of political power as a motive. If the prohibitionists should force one of the parties to insert a plank in the platform to suit them, it would be only securing the support of men who did not give a fig for their cause. One of the worst features, too, of this movement was that it drew to its support many political deadbeats seeking for personal power and plunder. The temperance folk should beware of these. The only true plan for temperance workers was to wait until the real temperance leaders should deem it best to make the start. When in the judgement of these leaders, other important questions had been so far settled as to render it expedient to take up this issue, let them step forth, cut loose from all parties, make their own platform, and start out with a determination to stand upon it whether they were many or few, whether they carried a single county or not, until they had worked up a sentiment and a party strong enough to enact such laws as they desired. Then they would have a sentiment strong enough to execute such a law, but not until then. The speaker drew a comparison between the prohibition party and the abolition party, and showed the differences. The abolition party did not seek for balance of power. They sought to build up a party.

Another blunder was the "church" blunder. The preacher drew carefully a line between the function of the church, and politics, and insisted on keeping the two distinct. Principles could be preached, but the pulpit should not apply them definitely enough to make the church the organ for any political party. The church was shared in by members of all political beliefs, and when the temperance issue was made a political one, it should maintain a separate organization, and not seek to use the church organization. The church was not an organization for accomplishing any one moral reform especially. Its central thought was the salvation of men. Its purpose was not merely to make men temperate, or free from licentiousness, but to get at the man's heart and change that. Then these others followed.

The speaker was closely listened to, and stated his thoughts with a clearness and wise choice of words, to which a mere outline of his discourse can do no justice. The honest practical suggestions given were refreshing to many who had heard so much intemperate talk of late on temperance.

COURT CONCERNS.

The Circuit Court was in session but a short time this morning and adjourned until to-morrow morning. It is expected that the cases from Racine, one for horse-stealing, the other, forgery, will come up for trial to-morrow. District Attorney Cooper, from Racine, will prosecute.

The case of Blank, charged with murder, has been set for trial next Monday.

Daniel Edwards pleaded guilty to assault and battery, and was fined $5 and $30 costs which he paid promptly.

The case of Fonda vs. Shimeal in which the plaintiff seeks to recover damages, for being shot by the latter, is set for Friday morning.

M. I. C.

The young peoples section of the Mutual Improvement club, will meet in the parlors of All Souls church at half past seven o'clock, this evening. Papers will be read, in the Industrial Biography section, by Seth Cushman, in the Lowell section by Misses Charlotte Prichard, Abbie Libbey and Lillie Godden. The meeting will begin promptly at 7:30.
